

Attorneys at Kelley Kronenberg have over 25 years of experience representing manufacturers, distributors, retailers, individuals, and their insurance carriers, in the complex area of products liability. Our Product Liability Practice Group represents a broad spectrum of industries, including retail, pharmaceutical and medical devices, boats and marine products, entertainment, oil and gas, electronics, industrial chemicals, and consumer appliances and automotive products.

Our attorneys have extensive trial experience and try a significant number of cases to verdict each year, including handling products liability trials and appeals in courts throughout the country.

Whether in motion practice, in settlement negotiations or at trial, our attorneys always aim to advance our clients' immediate and long-term objectives. Our attorneys have also used this extensive experience to counsel and guide clients through the complexities of product warnings, owner's manuals, contract provisions, and other aspects of risk management.

We offer decades of combined experience to meet the unique needs of our insurance clients. Within our extensive insurance defense practice, Kelley Kronenberg combines its broad experience and strategic planning skills to achieve the best possible outcomes for clients.
