

Kelley Kronenberg Hires Raymond Lowe as Chief Information Officer

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL— Kelley Kronenberg, a multi-practice business law firm, has hired Raymond Lowe as its Chief Information Officer. The IT executive is tasked with enhancing systems and infrastructure to accommodate the firm's continued growth. "By adding an executive with Ray's skill set, experience, and talents, the firm will be in a position to accelerate our process optimization work and the digital transformation of our technology applications," said Michael Fichtel, Kelley Kronenberg's CEO and Principal Partner. "At Kelley Kronenberg, we pride ourselves in being leaders in the legal industry in both of these critical business operations." Lowe is an accomplished technology executive with a combination of technical expertise and skills in business analysis, team leadership, and work process optimization in the design and implementation of software systems and business-enhancing technology. Prior to joining Kelley Kronenberg, he spent a decade serving as Vice President of Information Technology at a global leader in international logistics. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Lowe went on to receive his MBA with a specialization in Management Information System (MIS) from Nova Southeastern University, Huizenga School of Business and Entrepreneurship. "I look forward to working with the existing IT team to seamlessly support the firm's continued growth through technology," said Lowe. Lowe replaces the firm's previous CIO, Francis Magbanua, who has taken on the role of Chief Security Infrastructure Officer. In addition to working with Magbanua, Lowe will work closely with the firm's Director of Enterprise Applications and Integrations, Timothy Shields, as well as the firm's Director of Process Improvement, Bruno Munoz. "With this combination of senior talent and direction, we strive to maintain our leadership as a forward-thinking and innovative business in the legal industry," Fichtel noted. ###
