Jessika and Reynaldo Maiz both live with spinal cord injuries in their home in Sunrise, FL. Navigating one wheelchair in a home is challenging, but 2 wheelchairs can add stress to the daily functions of working from home and life management.

On Saturday, Jan 23, 2021, volunteers from Special Compass, a local non-profit serving the disabled community, will begin a 3-day home make-over to help them live more comfortably and improve their quality of life in their home. Day 1 will include, building a fence around the yard, painting the interior and removing landscaping. Day 2 will include expanding their master bedroom into their guest bedroom. Day 3 will include building a patio to cover 75% of their yard. This will give them freedom to navigate throughout their property and home and improve their quality of life. The home make-over will kick off at 730am where teams will specialize in various areas to work together safely and efficiently.

Kelley Kronenberg Chief Financial Officer/Principal Partner, Heath Eskalyo is an active member of Special Compass and will be one of the volunteers at the event.

Special Compass is a non-profit, 501-C-3 organization. Its 100% volunteer staff envisions a world in which differently-abled people have the opportunity to fully participate in a wide range of community and athletic activities while building friendships, enhancing their confidence, sense of purpose and fulfillment. Special Compass does this by pairing volunteer "Power Buddies" with people who are not able to propel themselves, so they can experience the thrill and camaraderie of crossing the finish line as part of a team. The benefits are reciprocal, as Power Buddies feel the love for those they tow.
