

In the execution of a probate document, forgery is when someone who has not been established as proxy signs a signature on behalf of someone else or acting as someone else. A will or other legal document procured by forgery has no legal effect. To prove forgery, the contestant simply can use a handwriting expert.